

The Bio-semiotic Roots of Psychoanalytic Metapsychology

Anna Aragno PhD
140 West End Avenue# 23C
New York, NY 10023
USA

Abstract

This paper provides an overview of the origins, vicissitudes, and abandonment, of ‘metapsychology,’ the psycho-biological scientific core of the Freudian opus, and introduces the authors’ key revisions. Although couched in the language of analogies from 19th century physics, the conceptual foundations of Freud’s theories contained the seeds of a bio-semiotic theory of mind and of human nature in the natural world: its updated, modernized version opens the door to an inter-penetrative epistemology leading to universal principles of logical form applicable to all types of vital inter-action.

Key Words: psychoanalytic-semantic; bio-semiotic fields; morphic-sentience; vital inter-actions.