Morning Sun, Edward Hopper, 1952

ON LONELINESS

Mount Sinai Medical Center: Goldwurm Auditorium
98th Street and Madison Avenue
March 24th, 2012

Loneliness is perhaps one of the most painful affective states a person can experience. It is a subjective experience that most of us have had at some point in our lives. It may be experienced as an intense emptiness or solitude, an isolation from others both internal and/or external. Or, it can be experienced as grief; a loneliness in the presence of others. It can be also be understood by its duration (e.g., temporary or chronic), or as Sartre noted, an essential feature of the human condition. Sartre believed this condition arose from conflict between the need to create meaning in life and the awareness of isolation or nothingness in the universe. For a psychoanalyst this idea might translate into an infantile experience of needing the mother and becoming aware that she is not always available.

Chronic loneliness has been linked to physical (e.g., cancer, stroke, high blood pressure and cardiovascular disease) and psychological (e.g., depression and schizoid pathology, impaired cognition and personal determination, sleep disturbance, suicide, alcoholism and substance abuse) difficulties. As we can see from the variety of manifestations loneliness is often a complex phenomena in both its aetiology and presentation.

The aims of Symposium 2012 are to explore this vast domain from a broad psychoanalytic perspective. Our introductory speaker, Lucille Spira, will open the day by framing the topic with a series of questions: Why is it so difficult for some people to find the connections that they say that they want? What makes people lonely? Is it due to desire, a deep sense of longing for someone, or fear, the result of feeling unsafe, unloveable, or toxic? Three panels will then provide a special emphasis on: Loneliness as revealed by the artists, the clinical dimensions of loneliness, and Loneliness/solitude in the Psychoanalytic Training Process.

We hope you'll come and join us in discussing this important topic.

Greed: Sex, Money, Power, & Politics

Greed was central to the recent American financial debacle. The debacle destroyed many trillions of dollars of wealth across the globe and vastly diminished the status of the United States as a model for economic life. Yet our understanding of greed and how it operates has remained primitive. Greed is, however, a desire; a desire for wealth and the trappings of wealth. Now, psychoanalysis has come to the rescue. Desires are what psychoanalysis is all about. In this fascinating collection of papers, we get insights and explanations not only of the phenomenon but of many of those at the heart of the debacle who appear to have been driven by greed.

—Marvin Zonis, Professor Emeritus, Booth School of Business, The University of Chicago.

Created in Our Own Images.com

Revises a forgotten comedy of W.S. Gilbert (of Gilbert & Sullivan), Pygmalion and Galatea (1876). Pygmalion, a sculptor, has made numerous copies of his wife. One of them, Galatea, comes to life and falls in love with her creator. The characters find themselves in a social and ethical entanglement of comic proportions that must be resolved by the play's end. The play thus evokes cloning at the start of the 21st century, the roles of men and women in 19th-century Victorian England and the discovery of psychoanalysis in the 20th. Expert writers from fields as diverse as History, literature, psychology, the arts, and sciences discuss the implications of the play with speculation and commentary on the ethics and future of life in the "Age of the Genome."

Sylvia Brody

Beginning to Grow: Five Studies

Beginning to Grow: Five Studies describes work with five children from infancy to maturity at age 18. The children's growth is traced with regard in terms of conflict and ego strength. Children's drawings are used to illustrate their lines of development by focusing on the drives towards voyeurism and exhibitionism.

"This is a book not to be missed by anyone who works with children. It provides an incisive history of infancy research and a longitudinal study of development from birth to age 18."

—Arlene Kramer Richards, Ed.D.

Jean Laplanche

Freud
and the Sexual

Jean Laplanche

Freud and the *Sexual is the translation of Laplanche's most recent volume—Sexual: La sexualité élargie au sens freudien—his work from 2000 to 2006.

Clear and direct, often witty, this volume is a pleasure to read and represents the culmination of his work. It includes his most famous recent work such as “Drive and Instinct,” “Gender, Sex and the Sexual,” “Sexuality and Attachment,” and “Sexual Crime.” Although these important contributions are widely known not only in French but also in German, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese, they are virtually unknown in the Anglophone universe even among those who admire Laplanche.
