Unconscious Messages: Exploring the Impact of Assumptions, Biases & Stereotypes

Britton Williams is a psychotherapist in private practice and is in her second year of study at IEA. She is a graduate of NYU's Drama Therapy program and has worked with children, adolescents, and adults in residential treatment facilities, domestic violence shelters, day treatment programs, and hospitals. Britton's work and research focuses on the impact of assumptions, biases, and stereotypes on individuals, relationships and communities. She currently works with adults and children in her private practice in Herald Square (www.thehealingstage.com) and at New York Presbyterian Hospital.

Where's My Face?: The Search for Authenticity Using Bodily Countertransference

Vanessa Hannah Bright is near final completion of IEA and has received her License in Psychoanalysis last year. She also has a Master's in Acupuncture from the Pacific College of Oriental Medicine (New York) and is a licensed acupuncturist. She is a writer and publishes an independent blog called "Loving Psychoanalysis" where she explores the psychoanalysis of everyday experience, as well as her process of becoming (and being) a psychoanalyst. She now has a private practice, where she integrates her knowledge of Chinese Medicine, Buddhism, and somatic meditation with psychoanalytic work. www.vanessahannahbright.com

The Possibilities of Dreaming: The Use of a Student Analyst's Dreams in Clinical Supervision

Meredith Glidden is a psychotherapist in private practice and is an advanced analytic student at the Institute for Expressive Analysis. Meredith received her Master's degree in Drama Therapy from New York University. She has worked with dual diagnosis patients in Mt. Sinai Hospital's psychiatric department and has extensive experience working with adolescents and families in both school and therapeutic settings. Meredith currently works with adults and adolescents in her private practice in the West Village.

Light refreshments will be served. This event is free, but please reserve your space at our website:
