To The New School community,

We were shocked and saddened to learn last night of the tragic death of Jeremy Safran, a professor of psychology and former co-chair of the Department of Psychology here at The New School. An internationally renowned psychotherapist, Jeremy was deeply respected and admired by The New School community and his colleagues throughout the psychology profession for his work on psychoanalytic theory and practice, as well as research on psychotherapy processes and outcomes. Jeremy earned countless distinctions for his work, including most recently the Society for Psychotherapy Research Distinguished Research Career Award and The American Psychological Association Division 39 Award for Distinguished Contributions to Psychoanalytic Research. We offer our deepest condolences to his family and will be offering support to his many friends and colleagues throughout the university community in the days ahead.
