

Lee Jenkins is a retired professor of English at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, and is a poet, novelist and psychoanalyst practicing on Manhattan's Upper West Side. He received the Ph.D. degree in English and Comparative Literature from Columbia University. He received his psychoanalytic training from the National Psychological Association for Psychoanalysis (NPAP). He has served as an instructor, supervisor, and training analyst at Blanton-Peale Institute, The Harlem Family Psychoanalytic Institute, and NPAP.

He is the author of Faulkner and Black-White Relations: A Psychoanalytic Approach (Columbia University Press, 1981); a book of poems, Persistence of Memory (Aegina Press, 1996); a novel, Right of Passage (Sphinxbooks.co.uk, 2018). A long poem, "City on the Hudson," was featured in Frontier Poetry in 2019 (<https://www.frontierpoetry.com/2019/10/25/poetry--lee-jenkins/>). All of his books are available on amazon.com.